The measures taken by University Paris Nanterre are communicated to the whole community by email and on the website: https://www.parisnanterre.fr/espace-presse/covid-19-informations-importantes-958340.kjsp

The university is currently implementing on-line learning and the new exam modalities are currently being studied by the university.

Although the university is closed, the International Office continues to work at distance and communicates with exchange students (by email only).

Incoming students have been reminded that they must comply with local instructions and the instructions given by their home university and home country. They have also been advised to return to their home country if possible.

All our outgoing students have been asked to return to France. Nevertheless, the Ministry of Higher Education stated on Thursday, March 19 that "For French students abroad who have just started their stay and do not consider themselves to be in a vulnerable situation, they are naturally advised to continue their training and to stay there if they wish."

We also wish to inform you that we will be flexible regarding nomination deadlines, and we believe that all institutions will do so.
